In April of 2004, the Federal Aviation Administration issued an environmental schedule, detailing the dates that would lead to its decision regarding O'Hare expansion. I feel strongly that the opportunity for review and comment has been provided and we should not delay any further. The O'Hare expansion project is the centerpiece for the modernization of our nation's aviation infrastructure. It is also the key to creating more than 500,000 new jobs in Illinois. We should not burden this project with additional delays given the time, expense, attention and review already invested. We must reassert ourselves as the transportation hub of America before it's too late.
